In the event of a major disaster, one cannot expect to rely on the government in all cases. Indeed, there is the issue of faulty planning for disasters exceeding far beyond the scope of what may have been expected. Doctor Phoenix Spry, a scientist and consultant for the A.L.A.R.M. committee, has been cited several times as arguing that “... we must overthrow the current standards of how we prepare for catastrophe before it’s too late.” And, unfortunately, it could already be just that.
